“Cogito, ergo sum”

-René Descartes

Kent Nabarrete is a non-traditional student graduating with music and music business degrees from San Antonio College. His path to completing both degrees took a circuitous route including earning a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Hawaii and a 30-year military career. He is thrilled to have had the opportunity to pursue his love of music through formal education as a life-long learner.

The experiences of the music business program provided many ways to solve real-world problems; and the challenges of maintaining an educational routine required extra effort and concentration. The program offers a great curriculum of knowledge and skill sets required for learning, growing, and personal development for navigating the music industry and related components in the entertainment, film, and social media environments.

He is fully confident in applying all the knowledge gained to help artists, performers, and technicians to attain their professional goals within this complex and exciting industry. The program also awarded him multiple industry certifications. Kent also participated in the SAC Student Leadership Institute and national leadership programs, including leading the Student Music Business Association.
